

ABSTRACT

A process for producing an antibacterial substance which comprises disintegrating at least a part of a plant tissue and releasing the antibacterial substance therefrom; and 5 antibacterial or bacteriostatic compositions containing the antibacterial substance thus obtained as the active ingredient. By using the above process and compositions, the proliferation of spore-forming bacteria can be efficiently inhibited.